

CAB 102: Introduction to Lumber and Wood Products

This is an introductory course to lumber, grades, sizes, characteristics and uses. Topics include the natural properties of trees, identification of various types of wood, the milling process, various defects found in wood, and how it is manufactured. Upon completion the students should be knowledgeable in the use of wood products for the production of cabinets and fine furniture.

Credits: 3

Lab Hours: 2

Lecture Hours: 2

0